Term 1 – Writing Sample Exams (Sample Exam 1)

Reading Text Then answer the following questions:

Many people dream of having a job that not only pays well but also brings personal satisfaction. The writer believes that pursuing a dream job requires preparation, persistence, and self-motivation. According to the text, success does not come only from talent but also from planning, learning new skills, and taking advantage of opportunities. The writer also mentions that facing challenges is part of the process and overcoming them builds resilience and confidence.

Some argue that luck plays a role in getting a dream job, while others think that hard work is the key. The writer agrees with the latter, stating that individuals who set goals, stay focused, and continuously improve their skills are more likely to succeed. Furthermore, the text encourages readers to seek advice from mentors, reflect on their strengths and weaknesses, and develop a long-term plan for their career.

Overall, the message of the text is clear: achieving a dream job is possible, but it requires dedication, self-discipline, and a willingness to learn from every experience.

Question:

Read the text. What is the writer's opinion about their dream job? Do you agree with their point of view? Explain in your own words. Write at least 4-5 sentences. Write least 60-70.

Writing Sample Exams (Sample Exam 2)

Part 1: The Challenges and Rewards of Entrepreneurship

Starting a business is often seen as a bold and risky decision, yet many entrepreneurs view it as the most rewarding path to personal and financial growth. Successful business owners frequently highlight the importance of taking calculated risks, learning from mistakes, and maintaining persistence even during difficult times. Research shows that small and medium-sized enterprises play a crucial role in strengthening the economy by creating employment, encouraging competition, and driving innovation. Through creativity and problem-solving, entrepreneurs often bring fresh ideas that improve everyday life.

However, the journey is not without obstacles. Many new ventures face financial difficulties, unpredictable market changes, or strong competition, requiring entrepreneurs to adapt quickly and think strategically. While some people prefer the stability and regular income of traditional jobs, others are drawn to the freedom and independence that come with running their own business. Entrepreneurship allows individuals to follow their passions, take control of their futures, and contribute meaningfully to society.

The writer believes that although starting a business involves uncertainty, the rewards can be greater than the risks. With careful planning, resilience, and a willingness to learn, entrepreneurship can lead not only to success but also to personal fulfillment and long-term growth.

1. What was the writer's opinion about entrepreneurship?

Do you think young people should focus on starting their own business or look for traditional jobs after school?

Use the following prompts to guide your writing:

1. State your opinion clearly.
2. Give two reasons or examples to support your view, using ideas from the text if relevant.
3. Suggest ways young people can prepare for their chosen path (entrepreneurship or employment).

(Sample Exam 3)

Part 1: Entrepreneurship in the Modern World

In today's fast-changing world, an increasing number of people are choosing to become entrepreneurs rather than pursue traditional employment. Starting a business offers freedom, creativity, and the opportunity to turn personal interests or talents into sources of income. Many entrepreneurs argue that success comes from innovation, persistence, and the courage to take calculated risks. Research shows that small and medium-sized enterprises play a vital role in national economies by generating new jobs, encouraging competition, and driving technological progress. Entrepreneurship also empowers individuals to make independent decisions and bring new ideas to life.

However, the path to success is rarely easy. Many startups struggle with limited funding, uncertain markets, and intense competition, leading some to close within their first few years. For this reason, some people prefer traditional jobs that offer a stable income, fixed working hours, and less financial pressure. Still, others believe that working for oneself and creating something unique provides greater satisfaction and personal growth than job security ever could.

The writer believes that despite the challenges, entrepreneurship is ultimately a more rewarding career path. It allows individuals to shape their own futures, develop valuable skills, and contribute to society through creativity, innovation, and determination.

1. What was the writer's opinion about entrepreneurship?

_____

Part 1:

Modern advertising has become one of the most powerful forces shaping our thoughts and behavior. Every day, people are surrounded by thousands of ads—on phones, billboards, and social media—each designed to grab attention and influence emotions. These advertisements often suggest that happiness, popularity, and success depend on what we buy. Over time, this constant exposure teaches people to value possessions over experiences and to measure self-worth by material things.

Experts argue that such influence is a subtle form of psychological manipulation. Advertisers use persuasive images, language, and emotions to make people believe they need products they could easily live without. Young people, in particular, are more likely to be affected. Many teenagers think that wearing certain brands or owning the newest devices will make them more confident or admired by others.

However, some believe advertising is simply part of a free economy, helping consumers make informed decisions and supporting business growth. The writer, though, argues that modern consumerism manipulates our desires and creates false needs. True happiness, they suggest, comes from living simply, being grateful, and valuing relationships and experiences over material possessions.What was the writer's opinion about consumerism and brainwashing?

2. Give two reasons or examples from the text or your own experience to support your opinion.
3. Suggest how people can protect themselves from being manipulated by advertising.

(Sample Exam 5)

Part 1: The Changing World of Work

The world of work is changing faster than ever before. Advances in technology, automation, and artificial intelligence are transforming almost every industry. Many traditional jobs that once required human effort are now being replaced by machines, while entirely new types of careers are emerging. For instance, fields such as digital marketing, cybersecurity, data analysis, and environmental management are rapidly expanding and in high demand.

Some people see this transformation as an exciting opportunity for innovation and creativity. They believe that technology allows individuals to work more efficiently, explore new ideas, and connect with global markets. However, others worry about job security. Millions of workers, especially those in manufacturing or routine-based jobs, may find themselves replaced by automated systems that can perform the same tasks faster and at a lower cost.

Education and training are becoming more important than ever. Students today must develop skills such as critical thinking, adaptability, and digital literacy to succeed in jobs that may not even exist yet. The writer believes these changes are positive overall because they encourage lifelong learning and personal growth. In an unpredictable world, the ability to adapt and evolve is more valuable than any single profession

1. What is the writer's opinion about the changing world of careers?

1. Clearly state your opinion.
2. Provide two reasons or examples from the text or your own experience to support your ideas.
3. Suggest what students can do to prepare for future career trends in a changing world.

(Sample Exam 6)

Part 1: The Importance of a Career Vision

In today's fast-paced and competitive world, having a clear vision for your career is more important than ever. A career vision helps people identify their purpose, set meaningful goals, and understand the steps needed to achieve them. It is not only about choosing a specific job but also about shaping the kind of life and impact one hopes to create. Studies show that individuals with a well-defined vision tend to be more motivated, focused, and resilient when facing challenges. They are better able to make decisions that align with their values and long-term goals.

However, many young people find it difficult to plan their future. Some feel uncertain about their interests, while others experience pressure from family or society to follow a particular path. There are also those who argue that life is unpredictable and that flexibility matters more than long-term planning. The writer believes that having a career vision does not mean being rigid or fixed—it means having direction while remaining open to growth and new opportunities. A strong vision acts as a compass, guiding choices and inspiring persistence. Ultimately, it helps individuals build fulfilling and meaningful careers that reflect both purpose and adaptability.

1. What was the writer's opinion about having a career vision?

(Sample Exam 8)

Part 1:

Everyone dreams of finding a job that truly matches their interests and values. For me, becoming a teacher has always been my goal because it combines knowledge, creativity, and service. Teaching allows me to help others grow, share ideas, and discover their strengths. Some people say teaching is stressful and demanding, but I believe the rewards go far beyond salary.

When a student finally understands a difficult lesson, that sense of achievement feels priceless. I also value the opportunity to keep learning. Teachers must update their skills, explore new technology, and adapt to social changes, which keeps the job dynamic and meaningful. Of course, there are challenges—long hours, heavy preparation, and high responsibility—yet these make the work more rewarding.

In my opinion, a dream job should offer purpose, growth, and connection, not only financial success. It should inspire you to learn, to guide others, and to contribute something positive to society. Although teaching is not easy, it proves that meaningful work can bring both personal and professional satisfaction. Everyone deserves a career that challenges them and makes them proud every single day. For me, teaching is exactly that.

What was the writer's opinion in the text, and do you agree with it? Give a reason for your answer. Write your answer in 50–60 words.
