Although he invented the game of basketball at Massachusetts, USA, Dr. Naismith was a Canadian. Working as a physical education teacher at Springfield College, Dr. Naismith noticed a lack of interest in exercise among students during the wintertime. The New England winters were fierce, and the students refused participating in outdoor activities. Naismith determined that a fast-moving game that could be played indoors would satisfy them after the baseball and football seasons had ended.

In December of 1891, Dr. Naismith hung two old peach baskets at either end of the gymnasium at the school, and, using a soccer ball and nine players on each side, organized the first basketball game. The early rules allowed three points for each basket and made running with the ball a foul. Every time a goal was made, someone had to climb a ladder to get the ball back.

Nevertheless, the game became popular. In less than a year, basketball was being played in both the United States and Canada. Five years later, a championship was held in New York City, which was won by the Brooklyn Central team. The teams had already been reduced to seven players, and five became standard in the 1897 season. When basketball was introduced in the 1904 Olympic Games in St. Louis, it quickly spread throughout the world. In 1906, a metal circle was used for the first time to replace the basket, but the name basketball has remained.
