B Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following text carefully and then answer the questions below:

Many species have disappeared because of people. One of the most famous is the dodo, a large bird that could not fly. People told stories about the dodo, calling it fat, slow, or lazy. They also said humans hunted it until none were left. When such animals disappeared, the environment became less rich.

The dodo lived only on Mauritius, a small island east of Africa near Madagascar. Before people came, the island had no mammals. The dodo's ancestors were pigeons that had flown there long ago. They found fruit, clean water, and no enemies. Over many years, they grew bigger and stopped flying.

When Europeans reached Mauritius, the Dutch settled and stayed there in 1638. They turned land into farms and brought chickens, cats, deer, and even rats. People hunted dodos, but the real danger was these new animals. Dodos used to bury their eggs in the forest to protect them, but rats and cats ate them. Cows and sheep ate the plants the dodo needed. Dodos moved further into the island and left their nests unprotected. Forests were also cut down for farms.

The last dodo was seen in 1662, when sailors caught a male and a female dodo. At that time, no one knew the dodo was disappearing. People did not even have the word "extinction" in this meaning until the 1700s. In 1833, scientists used the dodo to prove that humans could cause a bird to disappear. The Dutch left Mauritius in 1710, but by then many animals and plants were already gone forever.

B Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following text carefully and then answer the questions below:

Iceland is a small island country in the North Atlantic Ocean. It is often called "The Land of Fire and Ice" because of its many volcanoes and ice-covered mountains. Although its name is Iceland, much of the land is green, especially in summer. The country got its name from the early people who lived there a long time ago.

Iceland has a population of about 400,000 people, which is smaller than many cities around the world. The capital of Iceland is Reykjavík, which is also the country's largest city. Most of the people in Iceland live in or near the capital city, while the rest live in other parts of the country. The city is famous for its colourful houses, modern culture, and friendly people.

Iceland has many great treasures. Lots of tourists visit Iceland in winter to see springs shooting hot water into the air, huge waterfalls, and the northern lights. Such scenes paint the sky with green and purple colours. Visitors also enjoy relaxing in a natural spring which is called the Blue Lagoon.

Iceland is known for its clean energy. In Iceland, people never do anything to harm environment, such as using electricity that depends on petrol. Most of the electricity comes from natural energy resources, such as water power. This makes the country one of the greenest in the world. Although Iceland is a small country, it is full of beauty, adventure and unique natural wonders.

A. From a, b, c or d, choose the most suitable answer:

09. The best title for the passage could be:

a. Colourful Houses b. All about Iceland

c. History of Iceland d. Huge Waterfalls

10. The underlined word "relaxing " in the 3rd paragraph means:
