Part 2: Reading

Language

Language is an important part of communication because it helps people share ideas, feelings, and information. A native language is the first language a person learns at home from family members. Many people around the world also learn a foreign language to communicate with others from different countries. Learning another language can help people travel, study, and make new friends. In schools, students often practice speaking, listening, reading, and writing to improve their communication skills. Using simple words and clear sentences helps learners feel more confident when they speak.

Communication is not only about words. People also use body language, facial expressions, and tone of voice to understand each other better. When students learn a foreign language, they may make mistakes at first, but regular practice helps them improve. Knowing more than one language can help people understand different cultures and viewpoints. For example, bilingual students can speak with a wider range of people and share ideas more easily. Learning both native and foreign languages helps build strong connections and supports cooperation in a global community.
