Reading Comprehension (120–140 words)

Read the following passage, then answer the following questions:

Cheating in exams is a serious problem in many schools today. Some students cheat because they feel unprepared or afraid of failure. They may copy answers from classmates or use hidden notes during the test. However, cheating damages trust between students and teachers. It also prevents learners from understanding the lessons properly. When students depend on dishonest methods, they miss the opportunity to improve their real abilities.

Moreover, schools can solve this problem by promoting honesty and responsibility. Teachers should explain the consequences of cheating and encourage students to study regularly. Parents must support their children by helping them manage time effectively. Creating different exam versions and supervising carefully can also reduce cheating cases. When students believe in their efforts and prepare well, they gain confidence and achieve success honestly. Building a culture of integrity makes the learning environment fair and respectful for everyone.
