One morning, a young boy named Saad went with his father to the desert in Kuwait. They had a beautiful camel called Nasser. The camel was strong, friendly and very important to the family. Saad liked feeding Nasser and taking care of him every day. He often walked with the camel in the morning and gave him fresh water before the weather became hot.

While Saad and his father were preparing lunch near their tent, Nasser walked away quietly. After a few minutes, Saad could not see the camel anywhere. He became worried and started looking for him behind the hills and near the small trees. His father asked some campers if they had seen the camel, but nobody knew where he was. Saad felt sad because he loved the camel very much.

Later in the afternoon, Saad saw footprints in the sand. He followed them carefully until he heard a soft sound behind a large rock. It was Nasser! The camel was sitting near a small water place. Saad felt happy and quickly called his father. They gave the camel water and food before returning home safely.

Camels are very useful animals in Kuwait. They help people travel in the desert and carry heavy things. Saad learned that taking care of animals is an important responsibility. (217 words)
