Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

John's dog was a mischievous dog. It bit people frequently. It was not an appropriate way for a dog to behave. John was utterly concerned. The news about the dog spread through the village. None of the people wanted to go to John's house. John tried to instruct the dog to behave well, but it never worked. He tried to be patient and teach the dog to be calm. That also didn't work.

John's friend came to talk to him about the issue because the villagers asked him to represent them. His friend said, "Why don't you put a bell around the dog's neck? This way, we would hear your dog coming down the street." John thought this was a great idea. Now, people could stay away from the dog. It would not be able to bite anyone anymore. The dog liked the bell, especially the song the bell played when he walked. This made the dog very content with the nice song.

One day, John's dog strolled through the village and met some other dogs. He expected them to want a bell like his. But they laughed at his bell. They said the bell made people avoid him. John's dog shook his head. "No, they look at me because they like the bell."

The other dogs said, "You have the wrong idea of what makes you popular. Of course they like your bell. It tells them where you are so they can avoid you. You aren't able to bite them anymore!" You see, being popular isn't something positive when it's for the wrong reason.
