Part 1: Reading Comprehension

Read the following text and then answer the questions:

- A) All over the world, people greet each other in special ways. A greeting is often the first step in building friendships. It shows kindness, respect, and sometimes even joy. Learning about greetings from other cultures helps us understand and connect with people everywhere.
- B) In India, one common greeting is “Namaste.” People bring their palms together in front of their chest and bow their heads slightly. This gesture shows respect and peace. It is often used with elders, teachers, or anyone “they” wish to honor.
- C) In France, a popular greeting among friends and family is a light kiss on both cheeks. This is called “la bise.” The number of kisses can be different depending on the region, but the greeting is always warm and friendly.
- D) In Kenya, the Maasai people sometimes greet one another by gently spitting on the ground or even on a friend’s hand before shaking it. This might sound unusual, but it is actually a sign of blessing and respect in their culture.
- E) Although these greetings look very different—bows, kisses, or even spitting—they all share the same goal: to show respect and friendliness. By learning about and using these customs, we can honor other cultures and build positive relationships with people everywhere.
