VI- Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

16

Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions that follow:

Being 17 years old seems like the golden age. Although many teens could feel disappointed about not being an adult, it is easier than it seems. This is the time to think about your big plans in life, such as high school graduation and joining college. At this age, you don't necessarily need to worry about paying bills and living on your own. To be 17 is great, and it is more vital in a person's life than most teens think. It is the time for you to make mistakes, learn from them, and grow.

Being 17 means having younger siblings who are the noisiest people on the planet. As for me having siblings means having people to talk with and share my worries. Well, they are some of the best ones you'll ever know.

Being 17 means learning to spend money wisely. From my experience, there are two ways to help yourself spend wisely. First, write a list of your spendings to know how much you spend during shopping trips. Second, set a budget. It is a plan that includes what you spend in each area of your life in reasonable amounts. Aim to save some of your earned income. You will later have more money in your pocket.

Being 17 means that you feel that you are the center of the world. My personal experience with this lesson is when one time my parents told me I couldn't go to a party, as my finals were the next morning. I knew how important these finals were in getting me into a good college, but I selfishly believed that without me, nothing interesting would happen at the party and accidents might happen. I found myself surprised the next day when my friends told me that they had a good time.

Being 17 means that you are not sure what to do professionally yet. When I was younger, I wanted to be a marine biologist, a doctor, and a politician. By time I knew what my strengths were: English, History, and Communication which I teach now at the university. Do what you love; life experiences will move and shape you into who you will be later.

Read the following Passage carefully, then answer the questions that follows:

Your body has more than 600 muscles. These muscles help you move, carry things, pump blood through your body, and even help you breathe. When you think about your muscles, you probably think most about the ones you can control. These are controlled muscles, which means you can control their movements. They are also called skeletal muscles, because they attach to bones and work together with bones to help you to walk, run, pick up things, or ride a bicycle. Mouth and throat muscles even help you talk!

Keeping healthy muscles will help you walk, run, jump, play sports, and do other things. Exercising, getting enough rest, and eating a balanced diet will help keep muscles healthy for life. Healthy muscles let you move freely and keep your body strong. They help you to enjoy playing sports, swimming, and other fun activities. And they help you to do those other unfunny things that you have to do, like making the bed, vacuuming the carpet, or cutting the grass.

Strong muscles also help keeping joints in good shape. If the muscles around your knee, for example, get weak, you may be more likely to injure that knee. Strong muscles also help you to keep balance, so you are less likely to slip or fall. And remember, the activities that make your skeletal muscles strong will also help keeping your heart muscle strong!

Bone muscles are connected to bones by tough ropes of tissue called tendons. As the muscle tightens, it pulls on the tendon, which moves the bone. Bones are connected to other bones by tissues called ligaments, which are like tendons and help hold your bones together. Smooth muscles are also called uncontrolled muscles since you have no control over them. Smooth muscles work in your digestive system to move food along and push waste out of your body. They also help keep your eyes focused.

Did you know your heart is a muscle? It is a specialized type of uncontrolled muscle. It pumps blood through your body, changing its speed to keep up with your demands. It pumps more slowly when you're sitting or lying down, and faster when you're running or playing sports. Your skeletal muscles need more blood to help them do their work.

Digital technology has made life easier and faster, but has affected real life and damaged our relationships. First, it has made people live in a virtual world. A world where members of the family no longer talk together because they are busy with their smart devices. Second, it has damaged human communication. People rely very much on their phones to ask about their friends and families. Third, digital technology has bad effects on our health. It has led to a sedentary lifestyle where the internet replaced many of our activities. For instance, we no longer need to visit shops as we can do it online. Another problem with technology is that we have become dependent on it. Today people are so attached to their devices that they cannot live without them because they rely on them in everything.

VI. Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following Passage carefully, then answer the questions that follows:

There is a famous expression in English: "Stop the world, I want to get off!" This expression refers to a feeling of panic, or stress, that makes a person want to stop whatever they are doing, try to relax, and become calm again. 'Stress' means pressure or tension. It is one of the most common causes of health problems in modern life. Too much stress results in physical, emotional, and mental health problems.

There are numerous physical effects of stress. Stress can affect the heart. It can increase the pulse rate, make the heart miss the beats, and can cause high blood pressure. Stress can affect the respiratory system. It can lead to asthma. It can cause a person to breathe too fast, resulting in a loss of important carbon dioxide. Stress can affect the stomach. It can cause stomach aches and problems digesting food. These are only a few examples of the wide range of illnesses and symptoms resulting from stress.

Emotions are also easily affected by stress. People suffering from stress often feel anxious and have problems. They may have panic attacks. They may feel tired all the time. When people are under stress, they often overreact to little problems. For example, a normally gentle parent under a lot of stress at work may yell at a child for dropping a glass of juice. Stress can make people angry, moody or nervous.

Long-term stress can lead to a variety of serious mental illnesses. Depression, an extreme feeling of sadness and hopelessness, can be the result of continued and increasing stress.

It is obvious that stress is a serious problem. It attacks the body. It affects the emotions. Untreated, it may eventually result in mental illness. Stress has a great influence on the health and well-being of our bodies, our feelings, and our minds. So, reduce stress: stop the world and rest for a while.

Read the following passage, then do as required:

Having a dog helps a child learn how to act responsibly. As a dog owner, the child must take care of the animal's daily needs. Therefore, being responsible for a dog also means taking care of the dog so that it stays healthy. Furthermore, the owner must take responsibility for the safety of the dog and the safety of the people it comes into contact with. If the child forgets any of these duties and responsibilities, or ignores any of the dog's needs, the dog will suffer. This teaches the child that his responsibility to the dog is more important than his desire to play with his toys, talk on the phone, or watch TV.

VI. Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following Passage carefully, then answer the questions that follows:

There is a famous expression in English: "Stop the world, I want to get off!" This expression refers to a feeling of panic, or stress, that makes a person want to stop whatever they are doing, try to relax, and become calm again. 'Stress' means pressure or tension. It is one of the most common causes of health problems in modern life. Too much stress results in physical, emotional, and mental health problems.

There are numerous physical effects of stress. Stress can affect the heart. It can increase the pulse rate, make the heart miss the beats, and can cause high blood pressure. Stress can affect the respiratory system. It can lead to asthma. It can cause a person to breathe too fast, resulting in a loss of important carbon dioxide. Stress can affect the stomach. It can cause stomach aches and problems digesting food. These are only a few examples of the wide range of illnesses and symptoms resulting from stress.

Emotions are also easily affected by stress. People suffering from stress often feel anxious and have problems. They may have panic attacks. They may feel tired all the time. When people are under stress, they often overreact to little problems. For example, a normally gentle parent under a lot of stress at work may yell at a child for dropping a glass of juice. Stress can make people angry, moody or nervous.

Long-term stress can lead to a variety of serious mental illnesses. Depression, an extreme feeling of sadness and hopelessness, can be the result of continued and increasing stress. It is obvious that stress is a serious problem. It attacks the body. It affects the emotions. Untreated, it may eventually result in mental illness. Stress has a great influence on the health and well-being of our bodies, our feelings, and our minds. So, reduce stress: stop the world and rest for a while.

Having a dog helps a child learn how to act responsibly. As a dog owner, the child must take care of the animal's daily needs. Therefore, being responsible for a dog also means taking care of the dog so that it stays healthy. Furthermore, the owner must take responsibility for the safety of the dog and the safety of the people it comes into contact with. If the child forgets any of these duties and responsibilities, or ignores any of the dog's needs, the dog will suffer.
