16

Ghanem Al-Muftah is a young Qatari man, born in 2002. His doctor told his father that he had a disease called Caudal Regression Syndrome (CRS). His twin brother, Ahmed, did not have the same condition. Despite being born with a condition that left him without the ability to use his legs, Ghanem has been leading a full and active life. He has participated in sports such as scuba diving, rock climbing, and even football, showing the world that nothing is impossible. This shows his belief that his disability should not hold him back from achieving his goals.

Ghanem met the late Sheikh Sabah Al-Ahmed when he became the 'Reach Out To Asia's Goodwill Ambassador of Qatar' in 2017. The world noticed Ghanem when he participated in the opening of the 2022 FIFA World Cup in Qatar. Standing with American actor Morgan Freeman, Ghanem showed that the World Cup is a place for everyone, regardless of their differences. He then became a symbol of hope and determination. Ghanem has also been an active speaker, using social media to share his story and inspire others to overcome challenges. He often talks about how his positive outlook and faith in God have helped him remain strong and motivated.

Ghanem continues to be a role model for young people around the globe. His story proves that even in the face of difficulty, one can achieve greatness and inspire others to do the same. His journey reminds us that determination, courage, and a positive attitude can help overcome problems.
