Reading Comprehension:

Directions: Read the passage and answer the questions.

Walt opened his eyes. He had dreamed he was hearing his rooster crow, but it was really a car horn honking. He climbed out of bed and looked out the window at Youngstown, Ohio. The road outside his aunt and uncle's house was already full of cars. Where do all of these people need to go so quickly? Walt thought.

When Walt had arrived for the summer, Alfie had told him that everyone in cities owned their own car even the babies! His older cousin often made up stories to joke with Walt. But looking at the number of cars outside, Walt wondered if this one was true.

Walt thought about his parents. They had probably already milked the cows and were eating a quiet breakfast. It was 1920 in both places, but Youngstown felt like a new and noisy future.

The Turtle and the Rabbit,

One day, a turtle and a rabbit decided to race each other. The rabbit was sure he would win. After all, he was much faster than the turtle.

When the race started, the rabbit began to sprint as fast as he could.

Soon, he was way ahead of the turtle.

"I may as well take a nap," the rabbit thought. "That slow turtle will never catch up with me!"

While the rabbit was sleeping, the turtle kept going and going. He never stopped, even when he got tired. The turtle reached the finish line while the rabbit was still asleep. The slow turtle won the race!
