B) Reading Comprehension

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

My first ten years in America were happy, but they were hard. Life would have been much easier if I could have spent all my time studying. I was always in need of money and had to find ways to earn my living. Every summer, I managed to find work on a ship. When I first asked for a job, the shipping company official asked me if I could wait. Thinking that he had asked me to be patient and come another time, I assured him that I could wait. He called the headwaiter and I was sent to the sea as a waiter.

When the time for the first meal approached, the headwaiter asked me to get along. I felt like a frightened rabbit and looked around the kitchen for somebody to tell me what to do. The headwaiter shouted, "Take the soup." I looked for it and when I found it, I showed my inexperience by pouring it into a flat plate instead of a soup-plate. When I went back to the kitchen the headwaiter held my collar and started to shake me. "How could I say I was a waiter," he asked. I begged him not to be too hard on me because I needed a job. Luckily, under his severe appearance, he was a very kind man. He put another man into my uniform and asked me to wash the dishes for the rest of the trip. This was a personality-destroying job, but at least it didn't need experience.
