B) Reading Comprehension

Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Clark Junior High School was regarded as the top school in the city. I visited it at the request of school officials who wanted me to see Education in the city at its very best. Yet, it was a real disappointment to me. I was invited to attend an eighth year class preparing for the state exam. The teacher seemed devoted to the children, but three students sitting at the back near me were sleeping through the entire period. Four of the fourteen ceiling lights were broken. The corridor outside the classroom was filled with voices. Outside the window, where I could see no schoolyard, was an empty lot. In a Mathematics class of 30 children packed in a space that might be suitable for 15 kids, there was one white student polishing her nails with bright red polish.

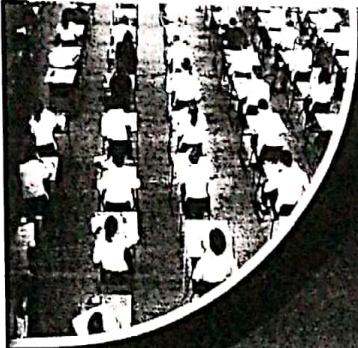

A tiny black girl next to her was writing with a one-inch pencil end. I asked the students what they have learned about the Civil Rights campaigns of recent decades. A 14-year-old black girl said this: "Every year in February, we are told to read the same old speech of Martin Luther King. I have a dream... - what is the other word?" She hesitated for so long and then found the word. She tried then to say something that amazed me much. "We have a school in East St. Louis named for Dr. King, The school is full of sewer water and the doors are locked with chains. Every student in that school is black. It's really like a terrible joke on history."
