Progress Check

Read the following text to answer the question below:

Pure water is a clear, colourless, odourless and tasteless liquid. All living creatures need water in order to survive. Forty to ninety percent of the weight of all living organisms is water. The human body needs water to get rid of wastes and to transport nutrients throughout the body.

Ancient Scientists thought of water as a basic part by which all other liquids are measured. At the end of the eighteenth century, a British chemist made water by using a mixture of hydrogen and oxygen. We now know that water consists of two parts hydrogen, the most abundant element in our world, and one part oxygen, the element that we breathe in order to survive.

Choose the right answer:

- 1- The main idea of the text is the importance of

a) the human body	c) oxygen
b) hydrogen	d) water

- 2- The word "abundant" in line 8 means:

a) present in small areas	c) present in great quantity
b) present in different shapes	d) present in small amount.
