Read the following passage carefully, then do as required below:

More than 1,100 species of bats can be found in almost every part of the world. Bats are unique because they are the only flying mammals. Mammals give birth to their babies and give them milk. The smallest bat in the world has a wingspan; which is the distance between the two ends of the wings, of only two inches and weighs less than a coin. The largest bat has a wingspan of about 1.83cm.

Most bats eat insects, but some types feed on fruit, pollen, and nectar, and others eat small animals like fish, frogs, and rats. Although many scary stories tell of blood eating bats, in fact, only three types feed on the blood of other animals. Bats are useful creatures. They hunt a lot of insects every evening. A brown bat can catch and eat 2,000 insects a night. In addition, some bats pollinate plants and flowers. They suck the liquid nectar from one plant and then transfer the plant's pollen to the other.

Bats are nocturnal creatures, which means that they are asleep during the day and active during the night. They have the difficult task of flying and catching all their meals in the dark. This is not a problem for them, because they use a special sound system. Bats make sounds that reflect off objects, no matter how small they are. Bats use the reflected sounds to form pictures in their brains of where things are located. It is a very accurate process that allows them to find and hunt a mosquito flying through the air in complete darkness.

Camels are the most important animals in the Arabian deserts. Camels are adapted to live in extreme environments, both hot and cold. A camel's body is suited for desert life. To shield against blowing sand, a camel's ears are lined with fur.

People all over North Africa and West Asia depend on camels. Camels are used to carry heavy loads and to transport people. Humans have used camels for their wool, milk, meat and leather. Camel milk is incredibly healthy.

On a desert trip, a camel can live on very little food and water. Its hump stores fat so it can go without eating for days. The camel uses the fats as a source of energy during its long journey in the desert. A camel can lose as much as fourth of its body weight without getting sick. Also, its body temperature can rise by more than 10 F before it sweats to give off body heat. The camel's temperature goes down when the desert cools off at night.

Mrs Gibson was 82 years old. One day, she was travelling to the USA with her little pet dog "Spotty" inside a pet basket. The flight that day was very crowded. A flight attendant said to her, "I'm very sorry, madam, I'm afraid I have to take your dog and put it at the back of the plane." After an hour, the flight attendant checked on the little dog. She was horrified to see that the dog in the basket was dead. She told the pilot. They got an idea. The flight attendant told Mrs Gibson, "Yes, of course it's your dog. It has the same spots, the same size - it's the same dog."

"No," said Mrs Gibson. "I know it isn't."

"But how do you know? You didn't look at it for very long."

"I know," said Mrs Gibson, "Because my dog was dead when I put him in the basket."

B) Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following passage carefully then answer the questions below:

Televisions show sounds and pictures. They get data from cables, discs or over-the-air signals. They turn this data into sounds and images. John Baird made the first TV in 1925. It had one colour. It could only show 30 lines. It didn't work well. But it was just a start.

The first TV station was set up in 1928. It was in New York. Few people had TVs. The broadcasts were not meant to be watched. By the end of 1930, TVs were working well. America participated in the 1939 World's Fair. This was one of the biggest events ever. There were 200 small black and white TVs set up around the fair. The US President gave a speech over the TVs. Unfortunately, World War II was going on during this time. Factories were busy making guns and bombs. When the war was over, TV spread across the country.

By 1948, there were 4 big TV networks in America. They presented their programmes from 8 to 11 each night. Local shows were aired at other times. TV was not "always on" like it is now. Colour TVs came out in 1953. They cost too much money for most. Also, shows were aired in black and white. By 1965, colour TVs were cheaper. TV stations started airing shows in colour.

Now, most TVs have systems for showing very clear pictures and producing very clear sound. TVs have come a long way since Baird's TV set. Some people watch TV in 3D. I wonder what they will produce next.

B-Reading Comprehension: (16 Marks)

Read the following passage then answer the questions below:

The history of perfume dates back to the ancient world. The Egyptians were the first to use it. Natural ingredients such as peppermint and roses are common in early perfumes. The Egyptians invented materials such as glass and used glass perfume bottles to store their perfumes. They also used gold, hard stones and other materials to make their perfume containers.

The Greeks classified perfumes according to the part of plant they came from and kept records of their ingredients. Historians have also confirmed that Islamic, Chinese and Indian cultures had been using perfume as part of their religious ceremonies and social activities as well.

The 18th century brought a great advance in perfume industry with the invention of eau de Cologne- "water from Cologne". A young Italian invented it in the city of Cologne, Germany. This was a blend of various herbs and flowers and it was very refreshing.

In the 19th century there were many changes in Europe. Modern chemistry and advanced technology made it possible to create new ways of extracting perfumes from flowers. The biggest of all technological advances was the ability to create artificial ingredients in the place of natural perfume ingredients that were hard to find or very expensive.

Both men and women continue to enjoy wearing perfume and cologne. Perfume makes people feel good. Today, you may be in countries thousands of kilometers apart, and yet you can still be able to buy the same brands of perfume. Nowadays perfume is cleverly advertised, attractively bottled and sold at a price that many can afford.
