READING COMPREHENSION

Read the following text carefully then answer the questions below:

Last Saturday, a little boy named Ali went to the park with his mother. He was very excited and ran to the swings while his mother sat on a bench. After a few minutes, she looked around and realized that Ali was gone. She became very worried and shouted his name loudly. People in the park heard her and started to help. Some called the police, while others joined the search.

Ali had walked to the small pond near the playground without anyone noticing. He was curious and wanted to watch the ducks swimming in the water. He was enjoying the ducks so much that he did not hear anyone calling him. The police arrived quickly and asked the people in the park many questions. They checked the playground, the pond, the streets near the park, and even the nearby shops.

After about forty minutes, a kind man found Ali near the pond. He held Ali's hand and called the police. Ali's mother ran to him and hugged him tightly. She thanked everyone who helped search for him. Ali promised never to go away alone again. Everyone felt relieved and happy that Ali was safe.

Read the following text carefully then answer the questions below:

Everyone has dreams. A dream is something you want to do or achieve in the future. Dreams can be big or small. Some people dream to be doctors, teachers, or engineers. Others dream to travel to new places, learn new skills, or help people. Dreams are very important because they give us hope and a reason to work hard.

When we have dreams, we feel happy and excited. Dreams make us try our best every day. We can learn new things and become better. Sometimes, dreams are not easy to reach. We may face problems, make mistakes, or feel tired. But if we work hard, stay patient, and never give up, we can achieve our dreams.

Parents, teachers, and friends can help us with our dreams. They can give advice, encouragement, and support. Reading books, practicing skills, and learning new things can also help us move closer to our dreams. Dreams are like a light that shows us the way. They guide us and make life meaningful.

It is important to have dreams and believe in them. Everyone can have dreams, and everyone can try to make them real. Dreams make life exciting and give us hope for the future. They help us grow, work hard, and be happy.
